Easterly Echoes

Mr. and Mrs. Allen McFarland, Barbara and Judy have moved to Viking. The community are sorry to lose these good friends but all wish them good fortune in their new venture. As a token of esteem the Battle River W.I. presented Mrs. McFarland with a lovely pin up lamp. She has been a faithful member and secretary since the W.I. was organized.

Mr. C. Feero has returned from a business trip to Edson. His father came back with him.

Owing to unavoidable circumstances the Battle River W.I. meeting date has been changed from the 8th to the 9th at 2:30 p.m. at Mrs. H. Pascha's.

We are glad to see Miss Reta Fenton home from hospital.

To set off a new lawn to the best advantage a good lawn is essential. It is isn't a difficult job for anyone to construct a new lawn, if the instructions in the leaflet "The Construction of New Lawns" are followed. A copy can be obtained free from the Division of Forage Crops, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

How can a lawn be kept in the best condition? The answer is given in easily understood detail in a pamphlet "The Care of Lawns" which is available free from the Division of Forage Crops, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

In the Spring of the year is the time to start the work that consistently carried on will eventually transfer a tired looking lawn into one that will look like a fine woven carpet. The pamphlet referred to gives the know how.

Glen-Coa Gleanings

There were Edmonton guests at the Smallwood farm over the 24th of May week-end. They were Mrs. E. Mills and three children, Mrs. J. Mills and two children.

Mr. M. Reitan plans a trip to Minneapolis next week as he is a delegate to the general convention of the Evangelical Lutheran Church. We hope you have a pleasant and inspirational time, Marvin.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Larson of Edmonton spent Sunday, May 30, with Mr. and Mrs. T. Larson.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Sigurd Fluevog, now of Vancouver, a son, John Edwin, on May 15. We are sure little Karen is a delighted sister.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Irving Moe (nee Phyllis Erickson) of Vernon, Wash., had another little son on April 30, Donald Irving.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert McBride (nee Lillian Lindquist) at Hardisty, on May 27, a daughter, Sharon Luther League Program.

The International Luther League program was held at Sharon on Sunday evening, May 30. Interesting readings outlining the Luther League work and aims were given by the following: Mrs. N. Fluevog, Mrs. P. Nelson, and Mrs. T. Larson, and a solo by Mrs. Fedal.

An offering was given for our "Youth for Christ" program. When all the envelopes are in we are sure Sharon will be on the Honor Roll as in previous years. Mr. George Pedel concluded the interesting account of his trip. He told us of old and famous places so clearly that we all felt we had taken a trip old England, too.

Next George took us to the Tower of London where they saw a among other things the room where Hess has been confined. The Tower Bridge also opened to let a ship pass through. The middle of February brought a very cold spell. It felt like 30 below zero to them, although there were but three inches of snow. Even in this cold raw weather the Pedel's noted that most of the men never wore hats nor covered their ears. George told us of visiting an old inn with its real old-fashioned fire-place with seats built in on each side. While visiting a farmer friend he saw some threshing done. Their machine had no blower on it, but it did have a baler to package up the grain neatly. He noticed that the English wheat looked plumper and bigger than ours but it did not have such good color and it was much tougher. The bundles were fed into the machine by hand. And the rats! George saw no less than 125 rats in one stack of wheat. He was asked what he did about rats in his bins over here.

They were surprised when George cheerfully answered, "We have no rats in Alberta." One other thing George noticed while on the farm, and that was the farmers were continually walking about poking the cattle, etc., for no seemingly apparent reason.

Another sight-seeing trip to London was made when they visited Madame Tussard's. All the wax-works were marvellous, life-size and real looking. Then to famous old St. Paul's. This great building is made up of many chapels and chairs are used for seats for the most part. It was not damaged much during the war. They went up to the Whispering Gallery nearly to the bottom of the dome, so called because by placing your ear close to the wall you can hear a conversation clearly from the other side of the building. They continued up the spiral staircase until they could look down from a height of two hundred feet. On the walls multitudes of names and initials were carved.

George mentioned the many museums free to the public. They visited the Science Museum where they saw Wright's first airplane, bicycles of long ago, models of steam engines of yore with wooden wheels. When they visited Leicester again for a last visit with Mrs. Pedel's mother they visited a school there. It was very big and very modern with two gymnasiums, work shops, cookeries, etc. It could be converted into a hospital in short order in case of

Irma and Mannville Go Ten Innings

EXHIBITION BASEBALL

The Irma ball diamond again resounded to the thud of bat on ball and the cheers of the crowds last Sunday afternoon, when the local nine tangled with Mannville in a thrilling 10 inning contest, that ended in a five to five tie.

The local team, although starting badly in the first inning when the visitors batted in four runs, seemed to snap out of it and battled right down to the last ditch to get a well earned draw.

We can see by the play on Sunday that the home boys need quite a lot of practice, but have the material for a better than average team.

Watch for posters announcing games in your town then attend and "Boost Local Sport."

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank all those who sent parcels, letters, cards, etc., to me during my recent stay in the hospital. They were very much appreciated. I also wish to thank the nurses and doctors for the wonderful care given me. Thank you all again.

need. A hosiery factory was another thing they were taken all through. This particular factory has orders from the Robert Simpson Co. There were stacks and stacks of socks. The manager donated two pairs to George with a souvenir card.

Pedel went on a trip by bus to Windsor Castle, where George was stationed 37 years ago in the Calgary regiment. The buses are mostly double deckers and a good view is obtained as you travel along. It was beautiful weather all through. Even with flowers and trees in leaf. They enjoyed looking at the lovely little villages they passed through, the picturesque homes still much in evidence with the new modern homes built on the outskirts. They saw the famous Eton boys' college and lads from eight to eighteen years strutting about all dressed alike in swallow-tail coats and tall silk hats, and very fancy socks which are displayed by rolling the trousers.

On reaching Windsor Castle, which is over 700 years old, George found his old quarters unchanged. Pedel was told that there are no mice or spiders in this old castle. They visited some of the dungeons which were small and dark.

The last visit they made was to Oxford where they were taken through Christ Church College. Then they had their faces turned towards the homeward trip. One experience was travelling in the tube under the River Thames. There they met Mr. Bill Lawson likewise homeward bound. After boarding the Queen Mary (by the way they crossed the ocean both times on the Queen Mary, not the Elizabeth) a terrible rain storm took place and great liner had to have six tugs push her around. This was at Southampton.

On arriving at New York and the finishing finally with the customs, they drove through New York at night. The marvellous sight of the "lights of New York" will always remain with them. It is truly something outstanding to see. As they reached Canadian soil they noticed the frigid atmosphere and the onward of snow east of Winnipeg. However, west of Winnipeg the snow began to lessen and their spirits rose. "Probably there will be no snow at Irma at all," George remarked. "We know what was in store for them when they stopped off the train at Irma, on April 10th, after a fresh fall of three or more inches of snow. The roads were minus overcoats and the sight was dismaying to say the least. A month followed before they could say hello again to their many friends because of road conditions. However, they had a wonderful trip and George says he is ready to go again when he can afford it.

The Dangers Of Soil Erosion

A PROBLEM WHICH HAS ALREADY received considerable attention in Western Canada, but which remains a serious one not only here, but throughout the entire world, is that of soil erosion. The loss of top soil through the action of the weather, poor methods of farming and other causes, has already cost this country a great deal, but in spite of this we are more fortunate here than are the people in some other parts of the world. In a recent address on this subject, Dr. Hugh H. Bennett, chief of the United States government soil conservation service, stated that the people on this continent, and throughout the world, will literally starve to death within the next one hundred years unless more care is taken to prevent soil erosion.

Shortages In Some Places

At the present time, Dr. Bennett said, there are about 4,000,000,000 acres of land suitable for farming in the entire world. It has been found by experts in nutrition that three acres of land are required to provide one person's needs for a "minimum nutritional diet." The population of the world is at present a little over 2,000,000,000, which allows an overall average of two acres per person now. What the situation will be one hundred years from now, if the population increases at the present rate of one per cent. per year, and the arable land continues to decrease through erosion, is alarming to contemplate. Should no land be lost, Dr. Bennett calculated that there would be only one acre of farm land per person, but if top soil continues to be lost at the present rate, the ration would be considerably smaller.

Constant Need For Vigilance

In Japan there is now only one quarter of an acre of arable land per person, in China one half an acre and in India one third of an acre for each person. At present the situation on this continent is less serious than in Asia. However, there is reason for concern. Originally the top soil in America was nine inches deep, now it is only six, Dr. Bennett said, and the crop land which is left is almost all subject to "erosion, flood and windstorm." In combating this situation, which could result in a considerable reduction of food production on this continent, the American soils expert stressed the need for "comprehensive crop and soil conservation measures, contour cultivation, drainage of low lands, planting of grass on steep land, irrigation and other modern methods of preventative conservation." In Western Canada an extensive program of soil conservation has been under way for some time, but farmers should be constantly aware for the need for continued vigilance in this important work.

$100,000,000 To Maintain Work

OTTAWA.—Although the federal government, in the Department of Commerce, a special branch has plans for about $100,000,000 worth of public projects ready to maintain employment—just in case—it was learned.

The department of government concerned is the Public Works branch of the Trade and Commerce ministry, headed by G. D. McAllister, whose appointment as acting co-minister was announced by Trade Minister Horne.

The big public works scheme will not be used until normal business methods of heading off a depression appear hopeless, an official of the branch said. It is only a "stop gap" to keep employment high he said, and will not be used until the situation appears to be getting critical.

There is no suggestion that a depression is on the way, it was pointed out. In fact, economists said that Canada seems headed for continued prosperity although there might be a business "recession" as time goes on. But if the rest of the world has economic troubles, Canada will be ensnared. It's with this thought in mind that the huge public works program is being developed.

Although detailed plans for about $100,000,000 are on hand at present, it was pointed out that a figure about 10 times this amount could be called into use in the event all provinces and municipalities co-operate with the federal government.

Meanwhile, the government is going ahead with its plans for encouraging private industry to expand and develop to create new prosperity and hold present levels. This is serving a double purpose—to conserve U.S. dollar supplies, as well as to encourage the normal development of new business in this country, it was stated.

Pigeons In Los Angeles Smart

LOS ANGELES.—For a while W. H. Smith thought Los Angeles had the craziest pigeons he ever saw. Now, the visitor from Chicago is convinced they're pretty smart.

Smith left his hotel, went around the corner and bought some handkerchiefs. As he started across the street two pigeons started following him. They kept at his heels like bird dogs. If he stopped, they did too.

Smith reached an intersection, was halted by traffic. The pigeons circled him several times, looking up at him. People began to laugh. Smith felt absurd. He returned to his hotel. There, a bellhop explained everything.

People are forever feeding pigeons in a square near the hotel. Smith had his handkerchiefs in a little paper sack. The pigeons thought he was carrying popcorn or peanuts.

WOMAN FLIER WANTS TO SET WORLD RECORD

VENTURA, Cal.—Mrs. Dianne Converse Cyrus, 25-year-old widow of an army bomber pilot, said she would attempt to set a round-the-world solo flight record for women this summer.

Mrs. Cyrus said she would circle the globe from Los Angeles via New York, Paris, Cairo and Tokyo in the hope of lowering the mark of 73 hours, five minutes, and 11 seconds set by William P. Odom. No women have ever flown solo around the world. The diminutive flier hosts the women's record between New York and Los Angeles. She has been working as co-pilot on an air freight line.

Offers Two Camels For Just One Girl

MONTREAL.—Next to models, perhaps the most glamorous group of working girls in our modern world are air line hostesses—but don't rush into that profession, ladies, until you hear this:

Just recently an air line hostess narrowly missed being traded for a couple of camels.

The story comes from the Royal Dutch Airlines, the company that is now negotiating with the Canadian government for permission to fly into Montreal Airport. It said that one of their aircraft was carrying a "venerable" sheik to Cairo when the attentiveness and looks of the hostess made quite a hit with the old Bedouin.

He was so taken, in fact, that when the aircraft landed, he made the captain an offer—he'd trade two camels for possession of the girl.

The captain, whose secret ambition was to ride a camel, was sorely tempted—but finally loyalty to the company won over personal avarice and he regretfully turned down the deal.

The hostess is still flying but now gives venerable sheiks a wide berth.

FUNNY And OTHERWISE

"My wife heard I took you out to dinner the other night."
"Well, what does that make me?"
"That makes you my ex-secretery."

"My dear," said the fond mother earnestly, "I can't think why you can't get on with your husband. He's all right in his way."

"Yes, I know, mother," said her daughter. "But he's always in mine."

Loses $75,000 Worth Of Gems Through Fake Phone Call

CLEVELAND.—A wholesale dealer in diamonds reported to police he had been tricked out of "at least $75,000" worth of gems by a telephone call.

Henry Blank, head of a Newark, N.J., firm said he left a few calls and his topcoat at the Danford-Lovell Co. and went to lunch.

Later his partner, Felix B. Lowell, received the telephone call. The caller identified himself as Blank. He said he was sending a hotel porter to pick up the case of jewels because he had to catch a train.

"And don't forget my topcoat," said the caller.
Lowell complied. He said the voice sounded like Blank's, and the reference to the topcoat cleared up any misgivings he might have had.

Wheat Rust Victory Worth $60,000,000

Plant Pathologist Recalls Loss Of $100,000,000 In 1916 Through Wheat Rust

MONTREAL.—Canada, through the advancement of scientific agriculture, saved some $60,000,000 through the successful combatting of wheat stem rust, declared L. L. Connors, newly-elected president of the Quebec Society for the Protection of Plants, which held its annual meeting at Macdonald College here. He succeeds Fernand Godbout.

Mr. Connors, who is associate plant pathologist, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, said that in 1916 the Dominion suffered a $100,000,000 loss through wheat rust. A start in the breeding of rust-resistant wheats was made in 1925, and the scientific research bore fruits in 1935.

Some four years later, he continued, rust-resistant wheats had been widely disseminated and last year there was practically no loss from wheat rust of the type which was such a menace in 1916.

Mr. Connors said that there was a constant race between the work of the scientific agriculturists and the menace of new plant diseases, insects and always encroaching weeds. This was illustrated, he said, in a new blight on oats, first found at Ottawa and now in all provinces except Alberta. It attacked the Beacon and Garry varieties of oats. There was an urgent need to develop new varieties which were blight-resistant, he added.

For the first time, declared Mr. Connors, a great chemical attack was being made against weeds. There were now effective chemicals, he said, as well as technically trained men to use them. Insects were a constant menace, and were imperiling great sections of Canadian forests and agricultural areas. Constant vigilance and an increasing amount of research were needed, he warned, as well as readiness on the part of farmers to use all the aids which scientific agriculture could develop.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

A Letter For Mrs. Smith

By ADDISON H. HALLOCK

BILL lay in bed watching the mirror of a new day being born. Tomorrow, he thought, will be Anne's birthday. . . and he would have nothing to give her. He turned away from the window and looked at his wife. How young she looked! And she would be forty tomorrow. Unbelievable!

Anne opened her eyes and smiled. Bill kissed her. "Sweet," she said. "Looks like we're going to have a nice day," Bill said.

"Mmm," Anne murmured, "I'm glad. Wish you didn't have to go to the office."

"Me too," said Bill. "I'd just like to be here all day and look at you." "Sweet," Anne said again. She turned to face Bill. "Oh, dear," she sighed, "I just remembered. Tomorrow's . . ."

"Yes, I know . . . your birthday. And I haven't one darn thing to . . ."

"Look, Bill," Anne interrupted hastily, "let's forget this one."

"Forget your birthday? Have I ever?"

"No, honey . . . but when a girl is . . . well, fortieth birthdays should be skipped."

"You look like sixteen."

Anne giggled. "Oh, Bill . . . I look like an old hag, and you know it."

The alarm broke in on them and Bill got up to shut it off.

Five years ago Bill had gone berserk. Wanting his wife to have the nice things other girls had, he had gone on a spending spree. He had surprised Anne with a new radio, a fur coat. He had given her all sorts of extra money to spend on clothes.

When asked where all this sudden wealth was coming from, Bill had said, "Don't you worry. It's a secret. Sometime I'll tell you about it."

"All these things are lovely," Bill said. "But you know I appreciate them . . . but shouldn't we be saving something?"

"Listen, honey," Bill had answered gruffly, "you deserve a break, and at last you're getting one. I love giving you things, isn't that enough?"

Bill's lavish spending had continued for more than a year. Then, one day, Anne was mending the coat of one of Bill's suits, when an overdue notice from a local loan company had fallen from a pocket. When Bill came home, she showed him the notice. At first he flatly denied any knowledge of it. But Anne pointed out that his name was on it and kept asking questions in a frightened voice until Bill's face exploded.

"All right, all right," he shouted. "It's mine. Where did you think the money was coming from anyway?"

Anne stood transfixed, watching Bill get into his hat and coat. She said nothing, felt nothing.

Just in case you're interested, Mrs. Smith, Bill said icily, "I'm in debt . . . more than five thousand dollars in debt!" The door slammed as Bill went out, leaving Anne standing there.

This had been the closest Bill and Anne had ever come to a separation. Sometime after midnight Anne had heard the bedroom door open softly. Bill had knelt by the bed and held her hand, asking her forgiveness. "To think I could hurt anyone I love so much!" He had confessed everything.

They had planned the sacrifices they would make to repay the money over the years, until streaks in the sky heralded a new day. Bill had promised never to borrow again. "We get in a jam," he had said, "I'll tell you. From now on we'll share our troubles as well as our pleasures . . . all of them."

It had been tough going. They had been dunned mercilessly. Many of their acquaintances had dropped them. Bill had lost his job but, when Anne expressed her faith in him, he took another one in the same town although the salary was lower. They had scrimped and saved. But Bill had kept his promise. . . he had never borrowed again.

Bill was remembering all this as he walked home from work the next evening. He was remembering how well Anne had been through it all.

"It's a wonder she didn't kick me out," he thought. "I must have been out of my mind."

Climbing the hill slowly he became gloomier and gloomier. "Anne's birthday," he growled, "and not a thing. Always before I've had at least a buck in my pocket." He could see the lights shining through the living room windows of the little house they had rented. "Those loan sharks! If I hadn't had to pay out all that dough just at this particular time!"

Anne was waiting for Bill in the hallway when he opened the front door. Anne, looking sweet in a dress six years old, Anne, smiling. Anne, rushing into his arms.

"Honey," Bill said, "Hap—"

"Don't say it! Don't you remember? We're skipping this one."

Bill held her away from him for a moment. "Gee, you look wonderful!"

Then he drew her to him again, and kissed her.

Anne helped Bill out of his coat, took his hat. "Oh, I almost forgot," she said, going to the closet, "there's a letter."

Bill looked down and picked up a letter lying on the little table in the hall. He glanced at the return address. "Won't they ever stop dunning us?" he asked in a discouraged voice.

"Oh, let the letter go until after dinner," Anne said.

"Business before pleasure!" Bill ripped open the envelope and quickly drew out the large white sheet.

"Dear Mr. Smith," he began to read sarcastically. "This is to inform you, in accordance with our records . . ."

Bill paused a moment. Then he began to read again, his expression changing. "The money you borrowed from us has been repaid in full, and your cancelled note is attached hereto. Due to an error on our part, we find that you have been overcharged on this account, and a check, drawn in your name, in the amount of $76.72 is here in our office. If you will call at our earliest convenience, we will . . ."

The letter slipped from Bill's lifeless fingers to the floor.

"Honey," Anne said, "Oh, Honey!"

Bill, holding Anne close, was glad that she couldn't see the dampness around his eyes.

"Our last debt," Anne murmured against Bill's chest. "You've paid our last debt—oh, Bill!"

Bill kissed the tip of Anne's left ear. "Happy Birthday, Sweetheart," he said.

U.S. To Build Huge Hangar In Alaska

OAKLAND, Calif. — The U.S. air force is building in Alaska what is believed to be the world's largest airplane hangar.

This was disclosed in an announcement by Judson Pacific-Murphy corporation that it has completed 80 per cent. of the pre-fabricated steel framework for the project.

The hangar will be at a point known as Mile 26 north of Fairbanks. Its dimensions: 300 feet long, 300 feet wide, 80 feet high. Sliding doors will open to a width of 260 feet. This exceeds the wing span of any plane now in service.

The framework, using 3,000 tons of steel, will cost $750,000 alone. It will be delivered to Alaska by rail and army transport.

2 cups cubed potato
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon mixed onion or celery
